Rice has a legendary history as a beauty treatment. For centuries, Japanese women have known and practiced the secrets of rice for ageless skin.

Rice contains many minerals, amino acids, antioxidants and vitamins (including Vitamin B and E). This super food not only nourishes the body, but also the skin.

SakeKasu is the fermented rice paste that remains after the Sake has been pressed. Nutrients dense and probiotic, it is one of the most bioavailable foods in the world.

A gentle enzymatic exfoliation results in healthy skin cell renewal. By blocking hyper pigmentation from melanin producing agent, freckles, dark patches and age spots gradually fade, revealing a bright complexion.

SakeKasu plays a restorative role in skin health and beauty. Substantially increasing skin moisture and supporting collagen production. This makes it extremely valuable as an anti-aging moisture retention agent.

When the skin produces pigmentation, melanin is activated by an enzyme called Tyrosinase. SakeKasu interferes with Tyrosinase and stops the overproduction of melanin allowing the skin to brighten, freckles and age spots fade.

SakeKasu contains three powerful antioxidants; Succinic acid, Kojic Acid and Squalene. These antioxidants eliminate free radicals and are known for their youth preserving, skin brightening and cell rejuvenating properties. Combined with three forms of natural Vitamin E, and Ferulic acid (a natural UV absorber) in the rice grain, Orizée Natural Skincare line plays an important role in sun protection.
